

About the Contributors

Arnold M. Azurin is a research fellow of the University of the Philippines' Center for Integrative and Development Studies (CIDS). A creative writer, journalist, and anthropologist, he is author of the following books: Reinventing the Filipino Sense of Being and Becoming; Beyond the Cult of Dissidence in Southern Philippines; and War Torn Zones in the Global Village.

Rizal G. Buendia is associate professor and chair of the Department of Political Science, De La Salle University in Manila. He obtained his Ph.D. in political science at the National University of Singapore. While working on his Ph.D. program, he was a recipient of the doctoral and research fellowships of the following institutions: the TODA Institute for Global Peace and Policy Research, the Southeast Asian Studies Regional Fellowship Program (SEASREP), and the Japan Foundation Asia Center.

Antonio P. Contreras is associate professor at the Department of Political Science, De La Salle University in Manila. He obtained his Ph.D. in Political Science at the University of Hawaii. He recently authored a book, Locating the Political in the Ecological: Globalization, State-Civil Society Articulations and Environmental Governance in the Philippines (DLSU Press, 2002).

Reynaldo C. Ileto is professor of Southeast Asian Studies at the National University of Singapore. He is the author of Pasyon and Rebolusyon: Popular Movements in the Philippines, 1840-1910 (2nd edition, 1987) and Filipinos and their Revolution: Event, Discourse, and Historiography (1998).

Carl H. Lande is professor of political science and East Asian Studies at the University of Kansas. His major publications include: Leaders, Factions and Parties: The Structure of Philippine Politics (1965); Rebuilding a Nation: Philippine Challenges and American Policy (1987); and Post-Marcos Politics: A Geographical and Statistical Analysis of the 1992 Presidential Election (1996).

Noel M. Morada is associate professor of political science at the University of the Philippines-Diliman and Fellow at the Institute for Strategic and Development Studies (ISDS). He obtained his Ph.D. in political science at Northern Illinois University under a Fulbright scholarship.

John T. Sidel is lecturer in Southeast Asian Politics at the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London. He is the author of Capital, Coercion, and Crime: Bossism in the Philippines (1999) and co-author with Eva-Lotta E. Hedman of Philippine Politics and Society in the Twentieth Century: Colonial Legacies, Post-colonial Trajectories (2000).